Herald Receives Very Interesting Letter from A. T. Lunn, Enroute to England

ALL ARE HAVING A FINE TIME

Baltimore, Md., Mar. 3, 1913.

Since leaving Alliance, on the morning of February 25th, we have been trying to keep our friends posted on our movements by means of postal cards. Mrs. Lunn writes all the time, on the train, in the hotels and sometimes from the drug stores where usually we purchase the cards and renew our stock of postage stamps. That may possibly sound a little odd, but in Baltimore particularly we find a large number of post office stations scattered through the city, located in the drug stores.

We have been enjoying ourselves immensely, as we left Alliance with plenty of time ahead of us before sailing to arrange a stop off at different points of interest. In Omaha, the chief center of interest was the Auto Show, and it certainly was an exhibit worth visiting. There we met Mr. J. C. McCorkle of Alliance and Mr. P. G. Cooper of Crawford. I was much interested in the chemical fire trucks of the Anderson Truck Co. of Omaha. You will remember that the firm placed the best bid for the proposed Alliance chemical engine about a year ago, and they have just sold one to Fremont, Nebr.

We heard of the Dewey hotel fire in Omaha, Feb. 25th, about one hour after it started, and all went down to the fire, but there was practically no hope for anyone in the building unless they got out at the first alarm, as it appeared to be a regular fire trap.

Chicago was our next stop. Reaching there Saturday morning, March 1st, we put in the day mostly in the shopping district, as it was too cold to go sight-seeing. We thought that we had become accustomed to the crowds in Omaha, but State street, Chicago, was far worse.

Left Chicago 5:30 p. m. Saturday, and our first daylight stop was Pittsburg, Pa., reaching there 6:30 a. m. Sunday, and it being Sunday we did not get to see much of the smoke from the mills, but we could see plenty of the tall chimneys of the mills. From there to Harrisburg our run, over the Pennsylvania line, was through part of the Alleghenies and about 115 miles east of Pittsburg we passed over the famous Altoona horseshoe curve. The Pennsylvania lines from here on run along the south bank of the Susquehanna river, and it certainly must be a very pretty sight during warm months. There was very little snow after we left Pittsburg, none at Harrisburg. From Harrisburg we turned almost straight south crossing into Maryland about 2:30 p. m. Sunday, reaching Baltimore about 4:00 p. m. Since then we have been able to disperse with our wraps, and today, Monday, we have covered the city pretty thoroughly, viewing Maryland's statue of George Washington and the numerous other statues for which the city is noted and admiring the marble and granite buildings which abound here. Druid Park, covering 750 acres, employing 200 laborers and 32 special police, was one of the beautiful places we visited. This park has 22 natural springs, and fountains and small lakes are scattered all through it. Arthur was very much interested in the zoological collection of camels, buffaloes, deer, monkeys, zebras, etc. It might be an inducement to the railroad company in soliciting a donation for the proposed Y. M. C. A. at Alliance to suggest to them that in Baltimore the railroads entering that point pay nine per cent of their city receipts to the city for the support of Druid Park, and it is operated entirely on these receipts.

Washington has over 60,000 visitors at the present time and it is reported that rooms there are renting for from fifteen to seventy-five dollars per day. We leave here for Washington tomorrow morning, and from there tomorrow night for New York. Do not care for more than one or two rooms in Washington at present, but will see what sights we can. President-elect Wilson passed through here for Washington this afternoon, but did not leave his car in the depot. Mrs. Lunn is acquiring a southern accent here and everybody is so accommodating that we feel very much at home. By the way, the picture shows do not run Sundays in Baltimore, but we visited four very fine ones today.

New York, March 5th.
We left Baltimore at 7:25 a. m. March 4th for Washington and were fortunate in getting out of Baltimore that early as from 10:00 a. m. to noon it was almost impossible for the railroads to handle the crowds. Some of the people tried to make the trip by hanging on to the steps and rear end of trains, and it was necessary for the police to pull them off. In Washington there must have been at least 250,000 people, and along the three miles of Pennsylvania avenue between the Capitol and the White House not only were the streets packed, but special grandstands erected at every convenient corner and every building facing the avenue presented a sea of faces. At the Capitol building, where at 1:30 p. m. Mr. Wilson took the oath of office, there was a compact mass of humanity. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Taft sat together in the front of the special balcony, arriving there about fifteen minutes before the actual ceremony took place. As we were within fifty feet of the balcony, we obtained a good view of both the outgoing and incoming presidents. Both were heartily cheered by the multitude. There seemed to be a general spirit of goodwill pervading the entire throng, and President Wilson's inaugural address, which you no doubt have read by this time, strengthened this feeling and of course the magnificent sample of literature turned out by the Weather Bureau assisted wonderfully.

We did not stay for the fireworks given on the White House ellipse, immediately after the parade was over, as our train was due to leave at 7:05 p. m. for New York, but will long remember our trip to this beautiful city and the magnificent buildings we saw, including the Washington Monument, White House, Capitol building and the different Administration buildings. It was well worth the trip, just for this alone.

Our time was growing short, so we decided to leave Philadelphia for our return trip and go on to New York. Reached here about daylight and as Arthur has been asking, "When are we going to see the ship?" our only visit here has been to the White Star piers, where we were courteously given permission by Captain Hamblen to look over the "Celtic" on which ship we sail tomorrow noon. Mrs. Lunn is well satisfied after looking over her home for the coming week, and if the present weather maintains we certainly will have a good voyage.

All passenger ships are taking the southern course yet.
We are in hopes that when we reach England the Alliance papers will be awaiting us, as we have no knowledge of what has transpired there since Feb. 21th. Good-bye for the present.
Very truly yours,
A. T. LUNN.
